

Culture: Japanese New Year's Food お節料理

Happy new year! In the last Obihiro Pioneer, we learned about the consequences of partying a little too much then driving drunk. In this month's Obihiro Pioneer, we will take it easy and talk about an essential part of Japan's new year: お節料理 osechi ryouri!

What's 「osechi ryouri」?

The kanji for 節 sechi refers to a period of time, in this case the first few days of the year. 料理 ryouri means cooking. Together, it refers to the cuisine made only for the beginning of a new year. First introduced in the Heian period, osechi ryouri mainly consists of food that is able to last at room-temperature for several days (often including a large amount of sugar and vinegar). This is because it is made before the end of the previous year.

What's so special about it?

Besides the fact that it is only eaten once a year, each dish has a meaning! Let's learn about some of the classic dishes you're bound to find in most osechi sets!

黒豆

Kuromame

Simply, black beans. The word “mame,” meaning bean, sounds like another Japanese word meaning “hard work and good health.”

海老 Ebi Shrimp

Shrimp in osechi sets are left shell and all.

Their long antennae and curved body is a symbol of longevity. It's often said as you grow older, your back will curve like a shrimp's!

The osechi ryouri list goes on and on! Be sure to try it if you get a chance this new year!

Living Tokachi: Staying Safe in the Snow!

Residents of Tokachi are no strangers to below freezing temperatures. This winter has arrived earlier with much more snow than past years. In this month's "Living Tokachi," we will go over some tips and advice to keep in mind over the new few snowy months.

Fresh Snow is Not the Best Snow!

By January, everywhere in Hokkaido has had at least some snow. Here in Tokachi, we're thankful to have so much sunshine, but this leads to the unwelcome danger of black ice (often called ブラックアイスパーン burakku aisu baan). The snow that melted during the day, quickly freezes as it gets darker and colder. Roads are particularly dangerous immediately after snow begins to fall onto slippery ice. Be extra cautious if you need to go out especially at the beginning of snow fall!

Watch Your (Car's) Behind!

It isn't a bad idea to watch your own behind, but for drivers it is especially dangerous if you forget about your car. Most drivers tend to leave their cars idling while shopping during winter. Make sure that the area around the muffler is clear! If the gas produced by the idling vehicle doesn't have an outlet, it will flow back into the vehicle. In the last couple of years, there have been incidents of drivers dying of carbon dioxide poisoning during snow storms right here in Obihiro.

Be Visible!

Make yourself more aware to drivers as you're trekking outside into the cold. Snow removed from roads and sidewalks tend to pile up, making it difficult for vehicles and pedestrians to see each other. Even if it is your right of way to cross, make sure to check for turning vehicles. With poor road conditions, drivers need enough time and space to stop. Wear bright-colored clothing and invest in reflective bands (which can be purchased at most 100 yen shops).

Look for 反射材 hanshasai to make sure it's reflective (and not just a brightly colored material!).

Take Your Time

While it may be the most simple and obvious piece of advice, it might just be the most important. Better to arrive late and safe, rather than not at all. Stay safe this new year!
